Support EPA Carbon Pollution Safeguards

Join us in sending a comment to the EPA in support of their historic carbon pollution safeguards for new power plants.

Fossil-fuel burning power plants currently emit more than two billion tons of carbon pollution and other toxic pollutants into the air each year. This pollution fuels global warming and increases the number of unhealthy air days, resulting in more respiratory ailments, heart attacks, asthma attacks, and other harmful health effects.

Meanwhile, big polluters are spending millions on lobbying, lawsuits, and a media campaign to confuse the public and get Congress to block the EPA’s action.

This is why we need your help. Please send in your comment of support to the EPA today.

Interfaith Power & Light, together with our allies in the environmental and public health communities, are collecting an unprecedented two million comments, like yours, to ensure the new standards take effect as soon as possible. Let us leave no doubt in anyone’s mind that people of faith stand on the side of God’s Creation, human health, and climate safety.

From Bill McKibben, 350.org: Create a Climate Dot

Dear Friend,

Across a world divided in so many ways, one of the things that—sadly—unites us is the increasing damage from increasing temperatures. So far science has been in the lead in sounding the alarm, and the insurance industry (the part of our economy we ask to analyze risk) has not been far behind. Now we need faith communities the world over to step up and do their part in reading, like Daniel, “the writing on the wall.”

On the weekend of May 4 - 6 (Friday, Saturday, or Sunday, depending on when your faith community gathers), we’ll help organize a huge global day of witness…. Read more
